How did the Fund perform during the reporting period?

This past year has been challenging for most subsectors within fixed income as persistent inflation and thus elevated interest rates have caused most fixed income assets to go sideways. Fortunately, due to the credit strength of our investments and our tactful investment thesis, we have fared considerably better than our benchmark historically. During the last year, duration rallied considerably; however, the Fund has much less exposure to interest rate duration and thus underperformed its benchmark.

Due to macro uncertainty and higher rates, investments in the Fund now yield more than they have in years and are less volatile than they were in the past. For example, before the 2022 bond rout, generic Non-agency RMBS senior bonds yielded 3-5% and now yield 7-12%. They are generally less volatile now than they were then due to amortization and continued strength in the housing market.

We have added and continue to optimistically add agency inverse interest only securities (IIO). These bonds benefit from the front end of the rate curve going lower, which would drive the coupon higher, hence the term inverse. This small position serves as a bit of a macro hedge in the event of large market disruption or recession. We anticipate the interest rate curve steepening towards the end of this year and into 2025, which would be beneficial for this position. This small position can have an outsized impact on total return for the fund.

Over the past year, we have maintained an allocation to select commercial mortgage-backed securities. While these securities provided positive performance in the past, they came under significant pressure late in 2022 and 2023. We did sell some bonds at the end of 2023/early 2024 as this subsector rallied. We find this sector to be one of the best opportunities in fixed income, albeit with specific asset selection.

How has the Fund performed since inception?
